Chad, You were taken to soon, but I believe you are now at peace. There are so many memories, I can't even count! Although you grew up to be a handsome (too handsome for your own good lol) and tough adult, I couldn't help but always see you as my little cousin. The kid who was always pulling pranks to drive me and Alice crazy, who always tugged at my parents heartstrings, looked just like your dad. You had to sing better, dance better, have the best hair lol and clothes and kicks. You always seemed to win people over with your smile. And you made everyone laugh. Omg! Even if I was pissed at you, you would say, "Whatever Tash", and make a joke and I couldn't stay mad at you. But it wasn't all looks and jokes with you. There were many years where we weren't just family, we were friends. You were my sidekick. We had lots of fun, laughter and tears and I learned so much about you...How big your heart was, how sensitive you were...I tried to treat you as though you were my brother. And maybe I didn't try hard enough or I just didn't quite understand you, but I always cared about you. And I'll always love you. And I'll be here for Alice and watch out for Tehya for you. Remember, the day she was born... We just sat on the floor outside the Labour room door and waited impatiently for hours. Talking about how happy we were and how lucky she was going to be to have us. (Obviously because you were cooler than me lol) but in my time with you, I've never seen you as happy as you were that day. I will cherish those moments forever. And the light of your memory will never burn out because I can still hear your voice and see your smile as a child and as a man. May you rest in peace, Chad. Until we meet again.

Love, Tash xoxo
